

You can really spread your wings when you're cage free! New Sunny Queen Natural Grain Cage Free eggs

Sunny Queen Natural Grain Cage Free eggs are laid by hens that really rule the roost. They are free to roam inside large, open sided barns where they can spread their wings, perch and lay their eggs in nests.

According to Julie Proctor from Sunny Queen, the new Natural Grain Cage Free eggs are also really good value for money.

"Natural Grain Cage Free eggs are only about 60 cents a dozen more than your normal cage eggs," Julie said. "That's just an extra five cents for each egg - which means you can choose a cage free egg with only a small increase in the price you're used to paying for cage eggs."

"The new eggs are good for you too. The hens are fed on a diet of natural, ripe, Australian grains which are 100% free of animal protein, resulting in a delicious egg with a beautiful golden yolk."

The new Sunny Queen eggs are designed to offer people more affordable egg choices.

"We did research which showed many Australians would prefer a cage free egg but can't afford the extra money for barn laid or free range.

"So the Sunny Queen team has created a new cage free farming practice involving automated feeding and egg collection, while the hens roam freely through a sunlit barn, and lay affordable, fresh, natural grain Cage Free eggs," Julie said.

"There is actually a fair gap in price between cage eggs and existing barn laid and free range eggs - around $2.00 more a dozen. And that's a lot for some families to pay each shop when they're already struggling to put food on the table for their kids."

With an RRP from only $4.69/doz and $2.69/half doz, Sunny Queen Natural Grain Cage Free eggs are now available at your favourite supermarket.
